Bartolomeo Gunther Voth was witness to events during WWII that would have driven any sane person quite stark raving mad. Yet he was given an alternative reality of circumstances when a surprise meeting with U.S. War Dept. agent Frank Wirtanen sets his life on a very different course of action.

After much work and hardship, a generous gratuity from the head of the Rosewater Foundation will bring his existence full circle and allow him to commit to a resource which will be the culmination of yearnings kindled years before, and now allowed to be offered to a populace in need of fulfillment. If not the fallout.

Is this a story only someone like Kilgore Trout could tell? You decide.
