The Memorial History of Hartford County, Connecticut, 1633-1884, Vol. 1 of 2 (Classic Reprint) J. Hammond Trumbull

Colony and State, -- and especially of the Towns upon the River whose planters framed the first constitution of Connecticut and laid the foundations of her civil and political institutions, is, as was said in the first announcement of these volumes, the issue of the Earl of Warwick's grant, known as the Old Patent of Connecticut, March 19, 1631 (March 29, 1632, new style); and the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of that date seemed a fitting occasion for the publication of a Memorial History of a county whose earlier history is inseparable from that of the Colony and State. Difficulties of obtaining such cooperation as was required to insure the permanent value and interest of the work, unavoidable failures and delays in securing promised contributions, as well as other causes which need not be mentioned here, have postponed the completion of the History until now, a few weeks after the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the first organization of civil government in Connecticut, by the first meeting of the Court of Commissioners for the River Towns holden at Newtown (now Hartford), April 26 (new style. May 6), 1636. The delay, however much to be regretted by the publishers and the editor, has not been to the disadvantage of the completed work.
